Stacy Brown Says He Made
No Statement About
Time of Death

IN THE REMPFER CASE

Stories of Such Published in Morning Metropolitan Newspapers

NEWTOWN, Dec. 1.—In an interview with a representative of the Courier this morning, Stacy Brown, Newtown undertaker, emphatically denied statements attributed to him in metropolitan newspapers this morning, regarding time of death of Frances Rempfer, Newtown high school girl, whose lifeless body was found in Double Woods last Saturday, and to whose murder Charles Arnwine, Newtown, has confessed.

Newspaper accounts appearing this morning in nearby cities informed that Mr. Brown gave it as his belief that the girl was not murdered on November 13th, the night of her disappearance, as the body could not have been in such fine state of preservation if this was the case.

"I don't know how they ever got such stories. I never mentioned to anyone that her death was more recent," said Mr. Brown this morning. "I simply stated that the body was in a splendid condition when it was considered she was presumably murdered November 13th."

One of the stories said to be Mr. Brown's views in regard to the condition of the Rempfer girl's body follows:

Frances Rempfer was held captive by Charles Arnwine 10 days before he murdered her.

Then fear of the consequences overtook him, and he decided to seal forever the lips that could accuse him.

As the 15-year-old Newtown High School girl lay asleep, Arnwine stood over her with a .32-caliber pistol in hand, fired a bullet through her exposed breast and killed her in cold blood.

Finally, he carried her body to a dump in Double Woods, a mile and a half from her home, and did his best to conceal it under an old mattress.

This reconstruction of the crime was made by investigators yesterday after it was disclosed that Frances had been dead only about four days when the body was found November 26.

In his confession Sunday Arnwine, twice married and once divorced, said he shot Frances at 2.30 a. m. on November 13, an hour after she had stolen from her home to keep a tryst with him after her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Rempfer, had prevented her from meeting him on other occasions.

Stacy C. Brown, of Newtown, an undertaker, yesterday revealed the fact that the girl did not die on November 13.

Brown, who prepared the girl's body for burial, was present when Dr. John J. Sweeney, Bucks county coroner, performed his autopsy last Saturday night. The undertaker aided in the autopsy.

"Frances Rempfer could not have died when Arnwine said she did," Brown declared.

A Brewery Here

(By "The Stroller")

"A brewery is coming to Bristol," "Who said so?" is the question asked.

"Oh! That's what they tell me," is the answer. Rather indefinite, but still the same rumor is on the lips of many here.

The story is that the plant of the Keystone Aircraft Corporation has been surveyed by those who are considering establishing a brewery here in view of the legalizing of beer, by the next legislature.

One report is to the effect that the bottles will be blown, kegs made, and that every operation in connection with a brewery and the selling of its product, is to be done at the huge plant, now standing idle along the Delaware river.

A group of men interested are supposed to have made a survey, recently. They are supposed to have discussed the matter going over on a train to Trenton, from which point they took an airplane and flew back to New York.

So there is the story. Figure it out for yourself. We are unable to verify it.

Plead Guilty of Patricide

San and George Tate, aged 15 and 19, respectively, are shown at Uniontown, Pa., after they had pleaded guilty to slaying their father, Isley S. Tate, 69-year-old Fayette County mountaineer, and stealing $200 from his pockets. It is expected that George will get a life term, but owing to his brother's extreme youth he may be shown clemency. The degree and sentence will be fixed by Judge S. John Morrow instead of by a jury.

LEGISLATIVE TURNOVER
HASN'T SIMPLIFIED JOB

Responsibility in the Pennsylvania Assembly Rests
With Same Party

ISSUES ARE NUMEROUS

(International News Service presents herewith the second of a series on the work facing the 1933 Assembly of Pennsylvania.)

By Joseph A. Loftis
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

HARRISBURG, Dec. 1.—(INS)—Since the last regular session and the two extraordinary sessions which intervened, the political complexion of Pennsylvania's General Assembly has taken on a new shading, but in the last analysis the majority—and hence the responsibility—still rests with the same party.

The unprecedented turnover in legislative membership obviously does not simplify the job of Republican leaders. Moreover, the Democratic dominance in that turnover, not so much as the mere upset itself, is the perturbing slant in the role thrust upon G. O. P. leadership.

About eighty new faces—or over one-third its membership—will be found in the House. The Senate will have more than a dozen initiates.

Here are nearly a hundred newcomers, a factor to be reckoned with in view of the tremendous task that will tax the best legislative brains sitting in Harrisburg. Probably never before have issues so great in number and variety, so significant and vital, confronted a Pennsylvania Assembly.

Aside from the relative merits of the legislation, one can glean an idea of the load, merely from the standpoint of volume, a legislature attempts to bear biennially:

At the last regular session, 2603 bills were introduced. Of that number, only 425 passed both branches and 64 of these were appropriation measures. A mere process of subtraction proves that 2178 bills died within the legislature. Scrutiny, however, reveals a staggering number of these never saw the light of day after they were introduced. They were referred to committee and that was the requiem. They were denied the saving grace of a floor vote which, at least, would have brought them a decent obituary notice.

More startling even is the fact that out of the 425 bills which passed both Houses, 256 were vetoed. That, in Pennsylvania, is another form of capital punishment. Vetoes are not overriden.

In view of the weight and multiplicity of issues, few qualified spokesmen will hazard a guess as to the probable length of the 1933 session. The 1931 session dragged past the mid-year point. The two special sessions since then, when the legislation was confined to jobless relief and the most kindred things, were protracted by bickering to seven and eight weeks, respectively.

Republican leaders burdened with the responsibility of preventing fiasco and stalemate find these comparisons not too encouraging. Coordination and harmony in the majority they have made their first objective.

for Saturday

EXPECT LARGE CROWD

Bristol's horse lovers will inaugurate their first horse show and riding exhibition Saturday afternoon, when the members of the riding club of the Bristol Sportsmen's Association will try in a five-evening program, to show who is the best horseman or horsewoman in this vicinity.

Final plans have been completed to have an afternoon's entertainment of fancy riding, jumping and showmanship in the saddle horse classes, on the farm of Dr. Edward J. Laing, Newportville Road, just south of Bristol.

The various committees planning this show haven't overlooked one detail. A large crowd can be accommodated with plenty of automobile parking, the contest field being so arranged that spectators can sit in their cars all around the field and watch the show. A club house has been made ready for the comfort of everyone, also refreshment stands to serve hot food.

The spectators will be sure of some keen competition in the various events as Bristol boasts of a large number of talented riders who have participated in other horse shows. The Powell brothers, Ralph and Clarence, Parke and George Wetherill, Frank Donnelly, Frank Hurley, Harry Hanford, Dr. Edward J. Laing, "Pete" Thropp, Dr. J. Fred Wagner, William Crawford and others.

Mrs. George Hussey, Mrs. Parke Wetherill, Mrs. Catherine VanSant, Mrs. Franklin Wills, Mrs. George Lasky, Mrs. Harry Hanford, Norma Wenzel, Harriet Reynolds, Janice Wagner, Mrs. Edward J. Laing and Gertrude Murphy.

The program is as follows:
Event No. 1, saddle horse girl riders; Event No. 2, saddle horse, men riders; jumping over course in ring; no jump over four feet. Horsemanship to count 50 per cent; Event No. 3, off and on contest for men riders; Event No. 4, rube jumping contest, over series of obstacles and jumps in ring, time only to count; Event No. 5, teams of two jumpers over series of jumps.

MARRIAGE COUPLE IN TANGLE

Mt. Holly, Dec. 1.—A run-away romance which ended in the marriage of Doris Deery, 17 year old high school student, to Charles Cook, 22, at Doylestown, today had resulted in a general tangle here where the newly married husband had been barred from seeing his bride.

Mrs. Helen Stevens, mother of Mrs. Cook, declared her intentions of having the marriage annulled. "Doris is too young. I intend to have the marriage annulled. I have forbidden Mrs. Cook coming around here," Mrs. Stevens stated. "I love Charles and I intend to stay by him," said the young wife. "I'll do all I can to prevent an annulment," said Cook.

DEER HUNTING STARTS

Stroudsburg, Dec. 1.—The Pocono Mountain deer country, embracing Carbon, Monroe, Pike and part of Wayne counties, was the scene of considerable activity today as both men and women deer hunters went into the woods at the break of day to try their luck. One of the oldest hunters to shoulder a gun is Joseph K. Terry, 55, E. Stroudsburg. Many women took hunter's licenses, records revealed.

TWO JUDICIARY
MEMBERS GIVE WET-DRY VIEWS

Dyer, Republican, Insists People Instructed Congress for Repeal

THEIR VIEWS CONFLICT

Tarver, Democrat, Says People Who Elected Him
Knew His Views

Two members of the House Judiciary Committee, which met today to consider a resolution for repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment, herewith present conflicting views on the mandate given by the people in the recent election.

A Republican member insists the people instructed Congress for repeal, while a Democratic member insists he is neither bound by the election nor by the Democratic platform.

By Rep. L. C. Dyer
Republican from Missouri
(Written Expressly for I. N. S.)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—(INS)—The people of the country want the Eighteenth Amendment taken out of the Constitution.

That was evidenced in the recent election, both in the selection of members of Congress and the referendum held in 11 States. It is now proposed that repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment be submitted to State conventions. While I favor repeal, I believe that the resolution should be submitted to Legislatures instead of conventions.

The reason is that the only argument for conventions is to give the people an opportunity to pass upon the question to be submitted. Since the recent election was so overwhelmingly in favor of repeal, as shown in the election of the national ticket, and members of the Congress, there ought to be no doubt in the minds of anyone as to what the wishes of the people are as to repeal.

To submit it to conventions would entail an enormous expense upon the taxpayers, and delay, if not defeat, the repeal. If it can be presented to State Legislatures, which is the usual way, there would be no expense involved.

By Rep. M. C. Tarver
Democrat from Georgia
(Written Expressly for I. N. S.)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—(INS)—I have throughout my public life been an ardent supporter of prohibition, and, since enactment of the Eighteenth Amendment, I have always openly declared my position in my district.

My people have at all times been advised of my views. I have repeatedly declared in public and private statements that I would not vote to repeal the Eighteenth Amendment. Neither shall I vote in favor of legalizing the sale of light wines and beer.

When I was elected by the people of my district this year as their representative in Congress they knew and well understood my views.

In my judgment the majority of the people of my district are not in accord with the wet plank in the Democratic platform.

One Man Leaps Over Cage to Get Cash — Quartet Speeds
Away in Large Sedan Along Street Road Toward Hatboro — State Police Begin Immediate Search

(International News Service)

SOUTHAMPTON, Dec. 1.—Four masked bandits armed with shot guns and pistols held up two officials and three patrons of the Southampton National Bank here today, twenty minutes after it opened for business, and escaped with approximately $3,000 in cash. A large sum of money in the vaults was overlooked. The men fled in a green sedan bearing New Jersey license plates. A few minutes later they were seen speeding through Hatboro headed toward the Delaware River.

State Police and Bucks County authorities were notified and watch is set for all bridges linking Pennsylvania and New Jersey.

Thrusting a sawed-off shot-gun in the face of Clarence Kohl, cashier, and intimidating Donald Hoagland, assistant cashier, the bandits forced them to lie on the floor. The three customers, L. K. Nash, Philadelphia bond salesman, formerly of Doylestown; C. W. Gulden, Richboro farmer, and Joseph McBride, of Southampton, also were forced to lie on the floor. The money was scooped from the cashier's cages and the men fled without looking any further. Three of the men participated in the actual hold-up, while a fourth stood guard outside the little bank.

Nash was in the building when the men entered. The other two customers entered while the robbery was being staged.

State police were called from Doylestown, Morrisville and Reading.

All highways and bridges were placed under guard at once.

This is the fourth bank robbery staged in Bucks County during the past two years. Three of the four were successful, while the one attempted at the Farmers National Bank of Bucks County in Bristol did not net the robbers a single penny.

The Chalfont bank was robbed of $4,000; Cornwells State Bank, $5,000; and the one today, $3,000.

MAKES WEIRD CONFESSION

Dauphin, Manitoba, Dec. 1.—In the little Dauphin jail house today sat Mrs. Paula Yachup, recounting her strange story of a four year romance with Frank Stowski, her farm neighbor. The mother of five living children, Mrs. Yachup confessed, according to authorities, she gave birth to five babies whose bodies were discovered buried in apple boxes in the back yard of her home. She accuses Stowski of being the father of the babies and having strangled them to death while she looked on. Stowski was lodged in another cell, refusing to utter a word. With Mrs. Yachup, Stowski faces trial for infanticide.

LINDBERGH BUSY AGAIN

New York City, Dec. 1.—A Colonel Lindbergh the world has not seen for several months strode briskly into the offices of the Pan-American Airways, took off his coat and proceeded to explain the technical details of the new Clipper plane which will soon be in general use on the lines. According to specifications, the new planes must be capable of "normal operation at high speed schedules for longest over-water flights between hemispheres." In other words, although the cautious Lindbergh would not admit it, the planes are to be capable of non-stop trans-Atlantic flights. The last time he was seen in public his cheeks were wan after having been brushed by the brush of tragedy; he was haggard and his eyes dull and lustreless, he seemed utterly defeated. Yesterday he was the "Slim" Lindbergh of his pre-flight days, smiling, cheerful, intensely interested in this new project.

Mennonite, 60, Charged With Embezzling Farm
Loans

$595 ALLEGED MISUSED

A 60-year-old Mennonite minister, Linford Foulke, Quakertown, is under $1,000 bail charged with embezzling Federal funds. Foulke is to be given a further hearing next Tuesday before U. S. Commissioner J. Howard Patterson in the Federal Building, Philadelphia. He received a preliminary hearing late yesterday.

Mr. Foulke, who is secretary and treasurer of the Bucks-Lehigh National Farm Loan Association, is the first person in this section ever arrested for violation of the Federal Farm Loan Act, according to Government agent.

Farm loan associations are chartered by the Federal Farm Loan Board to lend money provided from government funds to farmers within their districts. Foulke is accused of "willfully embezzling and converting to his own use" $595, over a period extending from December 19, 1927, to November 27, 1932.

Captain William Houghton, chief of the Federal Secret Service here, said the alleged shortage was discovered this week by investigators making an examination of the association's books.

Foulke is married and the father of two children. He said he had a church "outside" of Quakertown, Bucks County.

THE HABIT OF THRIFT

Lots of people expect to acquire all their good habits in their second childhood.

And one of the good habits long put off is thrift.

Often this habit does come in second childhood. With appetites and passions burned out of the decaying mind and body, old men may find themselves freed from temptations and wrongly consider their condition due to ripened virtues.

But thrift, like any other "virtue" forced upon one by nature, is apt to find its environment unhealthy and to curdle into penurious meanness.

If thrift is to be wholesome and sweet and fruitful it must be embraced while the mind and body are healthy and vigorous.

Thrift is a composite quality. It embraces within itself nearly all of the great virtues. It implies industry, prudence, forethought, self-denial. It certainly has no relation to niggardliness or meanness.

Some men would let their grandmothers starve to death for the sake of a few dollars. That cannot be called thrift.

And virtue carried to excess becomes a vice and is no longer virtue. Thrift that does not take into partnership honesty and charity sours into covetousness and avarice.

True thrift is the opposite of thriftlessness, prodigality, improvidence and waste.

Thrift means better homes and better food, more comfort and enjoyment, less waste and less anxiety.

Out of it grow quickened energies, firmer courage, more stalwart thought and hope, more orderly citizenship, education and good chance in life for the children, and the independence and self-respect that lift aimless, hopeless drudges up to true manhood.

UNLUCKY EXCEED THE LUCKY

Though there is now about $9,000,000,000 worth of gold in the possession of civilized man, it is generally accepted as a fact that the gold that has been taken from the earth is not worth what has been spent in its pursuit.

Many men have devoted lifetimes to searching for "pay dirt," but how many fortunes can be traced back to the lucky strike of some suffering prospector? Innumerable shafts have been sunk in lonesome mountainsides without finding yellow ore. He who wanders among the solitudes of the Rockies is quite likely to encounter the scars left on hillsides and in the gullies by prospectors who have worked claims that never produced.

Claims that proved bonanzas were few and far between. It was only the occasional strip of sand that yielded its yellow dust profitably, and in most cases even it was soon exhausted. On the whole, more has been spent in the quest of gold than was ever realized from it.

In this respect speculation and other forms of gambling are like prospecting for gold. The losses always exceed the winnings. Fabulous seem the winnings in the great lotteries of Europe, but the money that goes into them far exceeds that which comes out in prizes. Fortunes were made in a stock boom and for every fortune won many fortunes were lost.

SYNOPSIS

Young Dr. John Wolfe arrives at the quaint town of Navestock to become Dr. Montague Threadgold's assistant. Though shabby of dress, the young doctor's bearing commands respect. Dr. Threadgold is affable but his wife, who judges from outward appearances, considers Wolfe a "raw hawk of a man" and treats him coolly. Sir George Giggles, arrives with a dislocated shoulder. He is infuriated over Dr. Threadgold's clumsy treatment and turns to young Wolfe who skillfully sets the shoulder. Later, Dr. Threadgold tells his wife that Wolfe has some ability but is a little forward. Dr. Threadgold attends the prosperous patients and assigns his assistant to the poor section of town. The young physician realizes the pitiable plight of these people in the hands of a bungling doctor.

CHAPTER SEVEN

It seemed that his first impressionist sketch was to have the details blackened in that morning with heavy and emphatic lines. In three more cases Wolfe found that old Threadgold had blundered badly. The picture of the plump, spruce, affable little man kept jiggling before Wolfe's eyes as he realized how people were deceived in these Navestock alleys. He began to get a surer grip of Dr. Threadgold's character. He could imagine this soft and incompetent little man pottering here and there with abject indifference, bungling about, too easily satisfied with the good things of life to realize perhaps that he was bungling. How did a man come to such a state? Wolfe, with all his grim and almost fanatical thoroughness, could hardly glimpse the psychology of the thing.

Conical cynicism! He supposed such a state of mind existed. And in such a town as this! And it was here that another side-gleam of understanding struck slantwise across his consciousness. Ignorance and cynical indifference may produce identical results, and the dirt and the insanity squalor of these Navestock lanes were facts to be laid at somebody's door. Who was responsible? Who owned these rat holes in the river bank? Wolfe asked himself these questions, and in the asking the beaming face of Dr. Threadgold assumed another meaning. He remembered the good lady's remarks in the drawing-room over night. Old Sir Joshua Kerney was her ideal—was he? And Navestock was the most Conservative of towns! Laugh! His nostrils contracted as he followed fast Sam past a slaughter-house yard that was an abomination even in winter.

He turned into Bread Street, and stepped to glance at Dr. Threadgold's list and to consult with Master Sam. Bread Street ended at the river in a narrow old red brick bridge that gave room for only one cart to pass at a time. At this moment the bridge happened to be choked with a group of children who had gathered round a girl who was wheeling a couple of infants in a very battered "pram." A straight road bordered with willows cut across the meadows on the other side of the river, and a boy on a black pony was cantering along it towards the bridge.

Wolfe, who was looking towards the river, saw the boy on the pony brandish a switch and ride straight at the bridge as though he were charging the crowd of children there. They scattered like rabbits, the girl with the perambulator making a dash for Bread Street, the iron wheels bumping over the cobbles. One youngster refused to budge, standing sturdily with his back to the parapet, his fists thrust into his trousers pockets. The boy on the pony slashed this upholder of liberty across the face with his switch as his pony cantered past.

The mannikin (a boy of 12 dressed like a dandy of 30) switched the urchin as the pony cantered past.

Bread Street was a dirty street, pitted with large puddles, and about thirty yards from where Wolfe stood a little servant girl in a clean print frock was picking her way over the cobbles. The boy on the black pony saw another chance of amusing himself. He made his pony swerve, and cantering close to the girl when she was on the edge of a puddle, splashed the muddy water over her dress.

Wolfe stepped out into the road. The mannikin on the black pony came cantering up the street, glancing back once or twice to laugh at the servant girl's rueful face. He was dressed like any dandy of thirty, in neat little trousers, a green waistcoat, a well-cut coat, and a high hat. A gold watch chain and gold seals showed on his waistcoat. The child was not more than twelve years old, and yet had all the airs and assurance of a very complacent man. His flat and colourless face with its faded blue eyes and impudent nose had a queer resemblance to the face of some old roué.

The boy rode straight at Wolfe, waving him aside with his silver-handled switch.

"You, there, out of the way."

He looked greatly astonished when Wolfe caught the pony's bridle and pulled the beast up. The little gloved hand raised itself threateningly, but the man's eyes met the boy's, and the switch fell cowed.

"Hadden't you better ride a little more quietly, Master Tommy?"

Master Tommy, indeed!—This to Aubrey Brandon, Esq., of "Pardons," who in a certain number of years would have half Navestock in his pocket.

"What the deuce d'you mean, sir! Let go of my bridle."

Wolfe smiled in his face.

"You have got a big voice for your years, Tommy. If I were you I should go back and tell that girl you are sorry you dirtied her dress."

"Confound you, it's no business of yours."

"Cut along, then, Master Cub; I'm not your tutor."

He let the bridle go, but still looked at Master Brandon in a way that made the boy feel angry and discomfited.

"And who the dickens are you, sir, stopping gentlemen in the public streets?"

"Oh—I'm nobody, Tommy."

"You look like it, sir—you look like it."

Wolfe gave a quiet, yet hearty laugh.

"It's a pity someone does not give you a thrashing," he said; "but as you say—a cub's manners are no concern of mine."

Young Master Brandon went trotting on up Bread Street, his sallow face a little flushed and frightened. No one had ever interfered with him in Navestock before, save once on Peachy Hill, where old Josiah Crabbe's Calvinistic gardener had threatened him with a thrashing for knocking over a little girl. Most of the Navestock folk were afraid of the youngster and his mother, and had agreed to regard his little arrogances as the ebullitions of the spirit of youth.

Wolfe turned to Sam, the surgery boy, who was looking up at him with comical respect.

"Who was that youngster, Sam?"

"Lor', sir, that was young Master Brandon."

"Brandon, and who's he? Lead on to Paradise Place, Sam. It is marked down as being near Bread Street."

Sam led on.

DURHAM IRON WORKS MAY BECOME ACTIVE

Writing in the Philadelphia Inquirer recently, Girard had the following of interest to say about Bucks County: Thanks to science, many old gold mines abandoned 50 or more years ago are now being worked at a profit.

And Dr. B. F. Fackenthal, Jr., sage of Riegelsville, predicts that some day the ancient Durham Iron Works in Bucks county may have a rebirth.

Low-grade ore to be sure, but chemists are steadily whittling down the cost of extracting metal from native rocks, and it may soon be cheaper to smelt Durham ore than to pay long-haul freight charges.

For 20 years all the wheels around historic Durham have been stilled, but they were whirling there during the preceding 181 years.

Dr. Fackenthal's mere hint of a new life for Durham awakens a long train of eminent ghosts.

Durham Township, in the northeast corner of Bucks, contains about 6400 acres, and virtually all of it once belonged to the Durham Iron Company. We inaugurate Presidents on March 4, but on March 4, 1727, a dozen men of Philadelphia signed a partnership agreement which started the Durham Iron Works.

It was the fourth iron plant erected in Pennsylvania, and it had the backing of some illustrious gentlemen.

There was Anthony Morris, who in that agreement described himself as a brewer—head of the mighty Morris clan in this city.

There, too, was his son-in-law, Samuel Powell, described as a carpenter, who then owned 90 houses in Philadelphia.

And George Fitzwater—Fitzwater street was named for him—and he was grandfather of George Clymer, signer of the Declaration.

Langhorne's patron saint, old Jeremiah Langhorne, afterwards Chief Justice of the Colony and owner of a vast estate known as Langhorne Park, was another of Durham's founders.

And William Allen, too, who married the daughter of Andrew Hamilton, builder of Independence Hall and leading American lawyer of his time.

Mayor Charles Read, James Logan and Andrew Bradford were others who then plunged into Durham Iron, and the local social register of that day contained no worthier names than these.

Afterwards Judge Edward Shippen, of Lancaster, grand-dad of the winsome Peggy who wedded Benedict Arnold, and Joseph Galloway, arch Philadelphia Tory of the Revolution, became important shareholders.

Galloway's interest in Durham Iron became the core of an historic law suit.

When Pennsylvania voted to forfeit all his property on the ground that he was a traitor, among others who shared in the booty was the University of Pennsylvania.

Was that the first example in America of a college taking tainted money about which the ultra-pure recently raised a hullabaloo when Rockefeller's oil blessings began to flow?

But Galloway's daughter long afterwards went to court and recovered her Tory grandfather's share of Durham.

But the fellow who did most to make Durham a foremost Pennsylvania iron plant was George Taylor.

That Irish immigrant was a hustler, and when he took over the management there was great activity.

His manor house still stands there. He became a Northampton County Congressman, signed the Declaration and you today may see his town house—a little stone residence at 4th and Perry streets, in Easton.

Years later the Whitakers, kinsmen of the Pennypackers, were in control of Durham.

Then came Cooper and Hewitt—son and son-in-law of the illustrious old philanthropist, Peter Cooper—who owned that venerable iron works.

They bored tunnels, erected new furnaces and then departed, but at one time Peter Cooper held a mortgage for $200,000 against Durham.

Another romantic figure rises when you speak of Durham. It is General Daniel Morgan, whose riflemen in the Revolution scared the daylight out of many a brave British redcoat. He had no financial interest in Durham Iron, yet he was born in Durham township and his father worked at the furnace which made wagonloads of cannon balls for Continental artillerymen.

The original partnership was to run for 51 years—why that odd number nobody knows—but at the expiration of that period not one of the 12 survived.

Only a small stone arch which supported the stack is the sole relic today of that extraordinary old iron plant at Durham.

Ah, yes, but there are other relics, such as cannon balls, stove plates and such which now sell for nearly their weight in silver.

Dr. Fackenthal says there is but little water in the ancient tunnels into those great ore hills. The ore is low grade, but good.

He was the top official of the owning corporation when old Durham passed out of the producing picture.

Durham township is in territory very small—just an even ten square miles—yet in history it ranks with any in Pennsylvania.

Undertaker At Newtown Denies News Reports

that she had been dead only about four days. It is my firm opinion that Frances probably was killed on the night of November 22, the day before her father had Arnwine arrested on a statutory charge.

"When the body was found I was surprised at the excellent state of preservation. Then there was talk that this was due to the cold weather we had. I checked back with the Weather Bureau and found that outside of the day the body was discovered we had unseasonable weather.

"Three of the days were unusually warm. Then, too, we had rain on several days. The condition of the girl's stomach, intestines and other organs are positive proof of the number of days. I have examined thousands of bodies.

"Even if the body had been packed in ice from November 13 until the day it was found there would have been internal decomposition. A body would show this even in our morgue, which has a cooling system."

Brown said he had commented on these facts to Dr. Sweeney at the time, but the Coroner withheld his own observations.

Last night, when asked to comment, Dr. Sweeney said:

"I neither affirm nor deny the truth of Mr. Brown's statements. I have been instructed by the District Attorney's office not to talk."

Arnwine's story that he shot Frances while seated beside her in an automobile was contradicted further by the revelation for the first time yesterday of the exact path of the bullet. Arnwine said he placed his right arm around her shoulders and fired the pistol as he kissed her.

Hundreds View Body Of Murdered Newtown Girl

NEWTOWN, Dec. 1.—Hundreds of school chums and friends of Frances Rempfer, 15, murdered high school sophomore, viewed her body last night as it lay in the living room of the home of the girl's parents on Court street.

The casket sitting at an angle in one corner of the room was completely surrounded by floral pieces. Some were from members of the family, friends and others from members of the two churches where Frances attended and also students at the Newtown high school where she was a member of the sophomore class. The sophomore class sent a large piece made of chrysanthemums.

Reposed in an oak casket lined with white satin lay the body of the girl, who is alleged to have been murdered by Charles Arnwine, her twice married lover, and once divorced, who has confessed the deed. She was dressed in a light blue georgette dress made with a ruffled skirt.

It is estimated that at least 500 persons filed past the body from the time it was placed on view until near midnight. Groups of folks stood outside the house and other groups on the nearby corners. They were all discussing the case and numerous theories were advanced as to the motive and how the murder really took place.

The heart-broken parents with their son, Charles, Jr., 11, and daughter, Corrine, 13, sat on a side of the room directly opposite the casket. They were cheered as close friends halted for a moment and expressed their sorrow and extended condolences.

At eight o'clock 25 members of the Newtown high school sophomore class came in a body. As the group reached the house the students formed in single file and were directed by Stacy B. Brown, undertaker, to proceed through the hall-way, rear room and then past the body in the living room. They were headed by their teacher, Frances Merrick.

Fourteen members of the Friday Night Sewing Circle and 25 members of the Young People's Baptist Union also called.

A block down the street is the Arnwine home. There all shades were pulled down and blinds closed.

Four boys and two girls, all members of her class in school, will act as pall-bearers today. They are Albert Taylor, Jack Hart, Thomas Zozorski, Howard Richards, Margaret Whitlock and Margaret Dallan. Frances' father and Miss Frances Merrick, sophomore class teacher, selected them.

CRIME QUICKLY SOLVED

County Detective Antonio Russo and the State Police engaged in solving the Newtown murder mystery have been getting a great deal of deserved praise for the promptness and thoroughness with which they have brought the alleged murderer to justice, within 24 hours after the crime was discovered.

There probably are two reasons why the solving of crime in Bucks county is so much more successful than in some other cities or counties.

One of them is the fact that the county has an alert and capable county detective, while the other is the excellent plan of co-operating amicably and fully with the very efficient State Police force in the county.

While the crime did not contain as many puzzling aspects as some have in the past, it was not an easy one, and it is notable that the confession is said to have been gotten without the "rough" tactics of the "third degree."—Doylestown Intelligencer.

STATE NEWS

HARRISBURG.—Possession of firearms of any kind by unnaturalized foreign-born residents of Pennsylvania is prohibited. The penalty for violation is $25.00, and forfeiture of the gun.

Records filed with the Secretary of the Commonwealth under the provisions of the Uniform Firearms Act of 1931 reveal that guns are sold and licenses to carry are issued to such persons.

The Uniform Firearms Act prohibits the carrying of firearms of certain types in vehicles, or concealed on the person, unless a license has been issued by the police head of a city or a sheriff. Sales of such firearms may be made by licensed dealers only. Records of such licenses and sales must be mailed to the Department of State.

The provision against possession of firearms by unnaturalized aliens is included in the game code passed in 1927.

When a record reveals that a firearm has been sold, or a license to carry a firearm issued to an alien, the attention of all concerned is called to the prohibition relative to possession contained in the game law.

The Uniform Firearms Act contains no provision prohibiting sales of firearms, or the issuing of licenses to carry them to unnaturalized persons, and when guns are sold or licenses are issued to them, they are mailed, and unless notified are not aware that the resulting possession of the firearm constitutes an unlawful act.

HARRISBURG.—Driving past a street car that has stopped to take on or discharge passengers is a violation of the Vehicle Code, the Governor's Committee on Street and Highway Safety reminds motor vehicle operators. In the first ten months of 1932, this violation resulted in 82 accidents, five of which were fatal. In 60 non-fatal injuries resulted and in seventeen others property damage only was reported.

HARRISBURG.—State Highway patrolmen made 3518 arrests in October for violations of the Vehicle Code and other laws. The arrests included 118 truck drivers and eighteen bus operators, all charged with speeding. There were 251 arrests for operation of trucks in excess of the weight

OUR DAILY FOOD

By COLONEL GOODBODY

WHAT CAN SIZES MEAN

MRS. GOODBODY came to me with a question. "Why," she wanted to know, "are there so many different sizes in canned goods, and what do the different numbers mean?" She told me that many housewives are puzzled when they go into a grocery store and buy canned goods and asked me if I couldn't do something about explaining it all.

Of course, you know that a bigger can is needed for whole pears or peaches than for cherries. Then, there are convenient sizes for each food, the sizes which mean the least waste when you open the can.

Every can has the size marked on it in two ways. First, it has the net weight of the contents, in ounces. Then it has the size number of the can.

Here is a table giving sizes, contents and the number of cups of food in the common sizes of cans:

Can Number	Net Weight of Contents	Cupfuls
1	11 ounces	1 1/2
2	20 ounces	2 1/2
2 1/2	28 ounces	3 1/2
3	33 ounces	4
5	3 lbs. 8 ounces	7
10	6 lbs. 8 ounces	13

On the label you will find the quality of the contents. These grades are set up by the United States Pure Food Laws and all canned goods are packed in three grades:

1. Fancy, for which only prime material of uniform quality, color, form and size, is used. 2. Extra Standard of Choice, for which sound material of good stock, particularly uniform as to size and form, is used. 3. Standard, which includes field run of good stock, slightly discolored and irregular in form and size.

Some vegetables, such as corn, tomatoes, some kinds of peas, are canned without any additional water or seasonings. Usually, however, water and seasonings are added.

Fruits are packed in four grades: 1. Fancy—superlative quality, packed in extra heavy sirup; very high color, free from blemishes, uniform size. 2. Choice—fine quality, packed in heavy sirup, high color, free from blemishes. 3. Standard—good quality, packed in medium sirup, reasonably good color, reasonably uniform and symmetrical in size. 4. Is known as "Seconds"—tolerably uniform color, tolerably free from blemishes and tolerably uniform in size and symmetry.

YOUNG MEN'S FIVE TO PLAY ACES TONIGHT

Two of the undefeated teams of the Bristol Basketball League will clash in the Italian Mutual Aid Hall tonight when the Young Men's Association plays the Bristol Aces. In the other game the Third Ward A. C. will meet the Knights of Columbus.

There is much talk about this first game. The Aces have a small but fast five while the Y's are fast and contain all tall fellows. Both fives have eagle eyes for the basket. The Aces and the Y. M. A. were both victorious in the opening games last week.

The second game also promises to be composed of real action. The Third Ward club which gave the Y. M. A. a real tussle last week will be meeting an improved Knights of Columbus team. The Caseys have improved greatly since the opening fray and may spring a surprise and stop the downtowners.

The opening tap-off will take place at eight o'clock.

UNIQUE EVENT TO BE STAGED AT TRENTON

TRENTON, N. J., Dec. 1.—The most unique event in the annals of local mat warfare is scheduled to take place at the Arena Friday night. The Masked Marvel, who has been thrilling the crowds at the last four wrestling shows has accepted the challenge hurled at him by the Canadian Masked Marvel, who claims he is the original hooded warrior and that the Marvel appearing at the Stockton Street amphitheatre is an imposter. The Canuck wired Promoter Dick Curley that he has thrown the formidable Hans Steinke, who London refused to meet, in six minutes in Boston and that he never has been defeated. In his wire he stated that he is willing to wrestle on a winner-take-all basis and the mystery man who has been grappling here agreed to meet him on those terms. The bout is slated to a finish and at least one masked marvel will be forced to reveal his identity. With the entire purse at stake and also the continuing of hidden personality both men will strive mightily to emerge victor.

The "trust-buster" of the dark days of wrestling will appear in a special 30 minute event on the strong supporting card to the duel of the behemoths. Martin Plestina, Jugo-Slav champ, and one of the greatest wrestlers in the game, is matched in a time limit affair with the popular George Hagen, ex-marine champ. Plestina is a thorough exponent of every wile and artifice of the tug and grunt sport and has pinned every outstanding grappler. He has decisively defeated London and now offers the Greek $5,000 to sign for a match with him. Plestina's misfortune was not beating the title-holders when they wore the crown. In the State of Ohio he is recognized as the heavyweight champion.

Hagen is just the type arm-bender to make an interesting evening for Plestina.

Sid Westrich, youthful and popular Hungarian, makes his first appearance of the season in a thirty minute go with Art Dick, Notre Dame football luminary. Westrich is rapidly forging his way to the front rank in matland and is striving for a title match with the present champion, Ed "Strangler" Lewis. He has to overcome a formidable obstacle in Dick who is also seeking a niche in wrestling's Hall of Fame.

A companion finish piece brings together George Manich, perennial favorite, and Charley Hansen, Swedish tiger. Manich is a clever, clean wrestler and always pleases his audience with his sportsmanlike tactics, while Hansen is the rough aggressive type of mauler who does not care for the niceties of the profession.

Century Milstead, who has been successful in all his local bouts until last week when the Oklahoma Giant, Earl McCready, stopped him after a thrilling match, begins his climb back into prominence by taking on the newest Italian sensation, Lilo Nardi. This will be a thirty-minute time limit affair.

ARMY AND NAVY READY TO CLASH IN BIG EVENT

By Davis J. Walsh
(I. N. S. Sports Editor)

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 1.—(INS)—All is serene this morning but the next 48 hours will be bluster and uproar, a little breathless, even a little mad. The start will come late today when the two football teams arrive in town to take up their quarters at suburban retreats; the climax, on Saturday with the annual Army and Navy meeting at Franklin Field; the finish, no one yet can know or even surmise. This one promises to be the good-time rival of the generation.

It's a little early yet, but in the downtown district suppressed excitement, momentarily growing larger. The good hotels are sold to the doors. Theatres and the dine-and-dance places are making ready for a killing.

And, already, we have a ticket-scalping problem.

There are more than 79,000 seats at Franklin Field but there are more than 79 tickets on the loose in town at the moment, they are in the custody of the speculators and so, apparently, is their price. The service people don't know how to account for it; in fact, their announcement was that all tickets were "taken by subscription." But they must have meant, "taken by storm," because at least four scalpers were working one of the big hotel lobbies this morning, asking $29 a pair for choice seats and $15 for those they call "desirable." After, I suspect, the desire is for murder.

In other words, Philadelphia is preparing for its first Army-Navy game in ten years with characteristic gusto and soon its streets will ring with the sound of revelry by night and chaos by day. The Ritz is putting on a big time tomorrow night, the Pennsylvania and old Bellevue will be the scene of after-the-battle parties on Saturday for cadets and middles respectively and, from first to last, the streets will be impassable with shavetails and middies and dowagers and debs.

The teams will spend tonight on the outskirts of the town and come in tomorrow for brief workouts. The Army is still a little jaded about the Notre Dame debacle but is held the favorite here at odds of 8 to 5. However, there are neither takers nor givers so far.

JIMMIE HITCHCOCK
ACE BACK OF "CHET" WYNNE'S GREAT AUBURN TEAM--

MAJOR NEYLAND
TENNESSEES HIGHLY SUCCESSFUL GRID COACH THE VOLS WIND UP ANOTHER FINE YEAR WHEN THEY MEET FLORIDA DEC. 3.

TENNESSEE and AUBURN!
TWO CLASSY SOUTHERN TEAMS WHICH HAD FIVE SEASONS THIS YEAR!

AUBURN'S MARVELOUS SHOWING WAS ONE OF THE HIGH SPOTS OF 1932!

THE South has produced its share of high powered football eleven in the past, and this year Auburn, Tennessee and Vanderbilt carried on the great traditions of Dixie football, rolling up brilliant records to take rank with the nation's leading grid teams.

Tennessee and Vanderbilt have long been powers on southern football fields, but the tremendous strength flashed by Auburn this year was a big surprise, at least to fans outside of Dixie. Everywhere but in the South, Auburn was pretty much unknown. People thought it was an automobile instead of a leading southern college—but that was before the 1932 football season got under way.

Now the nation's football fans are Auburn-conscious in a big way. They know of Jimmy Hitchcock, Auburn's great backfield ace and captain, and they know that Coach "Chet" Wynne has made himself a place among the game's outstanding grid mentors, as a result of his team's superb showing this season. Captain Hitchcock and Talley, the Plainsmen's fullback, were both crippled by injuries toward the end of the season, so Auburn was unable to show its full strength in the closing game with Georgia a couple of weeks ago.

At Tennessee, Major Bob Neyland has developed the habit of producing a winner. The Volunteers always seem to be up among the country's leading grid outfits and this year was no exception. Major Neyland and his assistant coaches, Col. Parker and Major Britten, are all West Pointers, and they have drilled their men on the Tennessee team with a truly military precision.

The machine-like coordination which is stressed by Major Neyland's coaching system doesn't tend to produce football "prima donnas" and "outstanding" stars. In order to make a smoothly clicking unit out of the whole eleven, each player must play his part as a cog in the machine, and no one man is built up at the expense of anyone else.

In spite of this tendency to discourage prima donnas, Tennessee has managed to produce a number of outstanding grid stars in recent years. Everybody remembers Dod and Hackman, McEver and Hickman, and Saunders; and this year the Vols have Beattie Feathers, perhaps the best fullback in the South. Just the same, none of these great stars was pampered or favored. They played their parts and fitted into the Tennessee grid machines just the same as the less known players; but it just happens that their football ability was so outstanding that it could not be overlooked by the observers.

The Vols' football season has been a long one this year, the final game of an arduous schedule coming this Saturday, when Major Neyland's men go down to Jacksonville to take on Florida's 'Gators underneath the sheltering palms. Tennessee will be heavily favored to twist the 'Gators' tails, but even if they suffer an upset defeat in their grid finale, their 1932 season will still be a successful one considered as a whole. The Vols aren't likely to lose this final contest, however.
